RESEARCH EXPERIENCES

Spatial Computing and Data Mining Lab at University of Wisconsin-Madison
Independent research lab member, supervised by Dr. Qunying Huang Jan 2023-Present

- Examined the advantages of using Deep learning models to perform multiclass wildfire classification.
- Proposed a Bi-temporal U-Net model to get a better accuracy, especially for mean IoU value.
- Employed attention gates and residual blocks to enhance the model's performance on tough dataset.
- Combined automated and traditional thresholding labeling method to optimize the experience of labeling deep learning images.

Department of Earth, Atmosphere and Environment at Northern Illinois University

Senior independent research member, supervised by Dr. Wei Luo Jan 2023-May 2023

- Used machine learning models to classify wildfire incidents.
- Applied multiple models, including Random Forest, XGBoost, and SVM.
- Employed cross reference to tune the models.
- Evaluated accuracy with various metrics, such as OA, F1-score, IoU, etc.
